

Contents

Preface	9
Acknowledgments	11
Introduction	13
 The Interviews	 19
1 Benjamin R. Barber “Listen to no voice but your own”	21
2 John Bolton “Identify what the problem is”	37
3 Zbigniew Brzezinski “I say what is on my mind”	47
4 Noam Chomsky “You have to be sufficiently subordinate to power”	51
5 Jean Bethke Elshtain “9/11 created a very ‘teachable’ moment”	63
6 Francis Fukuyama “I just didn’t like being a bureaucrat”	75
7. Robert O. Keohane “Get people to see possibilities”	85
8. James M. Lindsay “People who are in a sense bilingual”	97

9.	Michael Novak “You better know about man and the different ranges”	107
10.	Joseph S. Nye, Jr. “There still is a desire to have some reality checks”	125
11.	Clyde V. Prestowitz, Jr. “There is such a thing as too much democracy”	135
12.	Anne-Marie Slaughter “In the wake of a trauma, there is a demand for narratives”	145
13.	Nancy Soderberg “9/11 woke the country up”	157
14.	Strobe Talbott “I am not crazy about that term”	165
15.	Michael Walzer “Critical distance is measured in inches”	171
16.	Cornel West “A blues man in the life of the mind, and a jazz man in the world of ideas”	181
17.	Howard Zinn “We are desperately in need of public deliberation”	197
	Bibliography	205
	Short Biographies of the Authors	209
	Index	215